Founder and Head Chef of FoodZen

Destiny's path commenced in Kitchener, where she found a loving adoptive family in a German household in Waterloo. She embraced their farm-to-table customs and her grandmother's wise culinary guidance throughout her upbringing. As Destiny grew older, she became more curious about her indigenous culture and cuisine.

In the midst of her accomplished tenure as a senior manager in the tech sector, Destiny's passion and curiosity for the culinary arts led her to the doors of Top Toques Institute of Culinary Excellence for a recreational cooking class.

“Education is power”

Shortly afterwards, the COVID-19 pandemic evolved and Destiny decided to quit her job and pursue her dreams of becoming an entrepreneurial chef full-time.

Enrolling in the Specialist Chef program at Top Toques, Destiny discovered an educational environment that fostered her growth and individuality. With the flexibility and support of her Chef Instructors, Destiny was able to manage and excel in her program with dyslexia. She exhibited unyielding resilience as she honed her skills and fortified her culinary spirit. Graduating from the college with an honours diploma, she established Food Zen—a catering service to honour indigenous culinary cuisine and holistic cooking principles.
